THE CITY'S TOP MOVERS & SHAKERS

They hold the whole city in their hands — the realtors, owners and managers of New York's skyscrapers, shops and warehouses. They keep the wheels of the city's economy turning, and revitalize the city — from downtown to Times Square to the Meatpacking District. Who are these people?

The Post rounds up the top wheelers and dealers who are shaping New York.

Mogull Realty

In 2004, Donald J. Trump read about Kim Mogull in the Post and called her to his offices.

By the end of that meeting she'd taken his advice to start her own company and had the first of many exclusive assignments for his retail stores.

She personally services clients that range from Trump to Sherwood Equities, the Ganesvoort Hotel, Scoop, Megu, Oceana and David Barton Gyms.

Among other deals last year, she brought Myles Chefetz of Prime 112 Steakhouse to the upcoming Ganesvoort on Park Avenue South and Fresco to the Witkoff building at 10 Hanover Street.
